

The Psychology of Second Language Learning

Edited by PAUL PIMSLEUR and
TERENCE QUINN

The papers in this volume discuss the numerous psychological approaches which currently characterize second language teaching. Among themes which emerge are a new focus on the individual learner as the central element in language teaching, a growing awareness that the receptive skills of listening and reading are more complex than had been imagined, and a desire to bring students into closer touch with the 'real' language as used in daily life by native speakers.

A Course in Spoken English: Grammar

J. McH. SINCLAIR

This is the third volume in A Course in Spoken English. The grammar described is that of modern English usage, with particular emphasis on those structures that are common to the spoken language.

The four chapters take the major grammatical categories of sentence, clause, nominal groups, and verbal and adverbial groups. The structures and systems operating within each category are considered and are linked to exponents of the language. Explicit use is made of such notions as deep and surface structure, rank and delicacy, and the whole grammar has been prepared against a background of the most recent work in linguistics.

The structuring of the sections within the chapters into descriptive material and exercise material makes the book particularly suitable as a pedagogic grammar which will have applications both for the native-speaking student of English and for advanced students and teachers of English as a foreign language. £1.50

The other two titles in the series are:

A Course in Spoken English: Texts, Drills and Tests Ronald Mackin

A Course in Spoken English: Intonation M. A. K. Halliday

English-Teaching Information Centre (ETIC)

The English-Teaching Information Centre is maintained by the British Council as a study centre and clearing-house for information on all aspects of teaching English as a second or foreign language overseas. Since its foundation in 1961 the Centre has developed a network of communication with individuals and institutions in Great Britain and more than 120 other countries. Its services are available to all who are professionally concerned – students, teachers, trainers of teachers, research workers, administrators or writers. Enquiries should be addressed to:
