

John Mueller

Jim Twombly, visiting assistant lecturer, State University of New York at Buffalo; formerly State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Award Recipients

American Academy of Arts and Sciences

John Mueller, professor of political science and film studies, University of Rochester, has been elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. In addition to his most recent book, Retreat from Doomsday: The Obsolescence of Major War (Basic Books, 1989) written on a Guggenheim Fellowship, he has written Astaire Dancing: The Musical Films (Knopf, 1985), which has won the de la Torre Bueno prize of the Dance Perspectives Foundation.

David S. Broder, The Washington Post, has been elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

American Council of Learned Societies

Postdoctoral Research Fellowships

Richard E. Ashcraft, University of California, Los Angeles. The political ideas and activities of the working class in Victorian England and the political thought of John Stuart Mill.

Fellowships for Recent Recipients of the Ph.D.

Nancy J. Hirschmann, Cornell University. "Your Most Humble Servant": the gender politics of John Locke.

Grants-in-Aid for Postdoctoral Research

Judith Abbott Baer, Texas A&M University. Men's law, the future of woman-centered jurisprudence.

Paul Roazen, York University. Documents in the early history of psychoanalysis.

Research and Advanced Training in East European Studies

Fellowships for research and writing of dissertations relevant to Eastern Europe were awarded to political science doctoral candidates:

Joann F. Goven, University of California, Berkeley. Historical development of the interrelations of gender and class in Hungary.

Annamaria Seleny, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The Hungarian second economy as political arena.

Fellowships for advanced graduate study and training were awarded to graduate students preparing to write dissertations on Eastern Europe:

Barbara M. Connolly, University of California, Berkeley. Inter-German political and economic relations and general East-West relations; preparation for comprehensive exams and dissertation.

Grants were made for Eastern European language training:

Jonathan A. Terra, Columbia University, for the study of Polish.

Alex J. Zucker, Columbia University, for the study of Czech.

Postdoctoral Fellowships in Chinese Studies

Shelley E. Rigger, Harvard University. Research in Taiwan on the Kuomintang and the Democratic Progressive Party: political reform and organized opposition in the Republic of China.

Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies

The Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies at the University of California, San Diego, has announced the winners of its 11th annual residential fellowship competition. The 19 scholars awarded fellowships for 1990-91 include the following political scientists, their affiliation, research topic, and dates of residence.

Maxwell Cameron, Carleton University, Ottawa. Micro and Macro Logics of Political Action: Informal Sector Politics in Peru and Mexico. January-August 1991.

Vikram K. Chang, Ph.D. candidate, Harvard University. The Reawakening of Civil Society in Contemporary Mexico: The Politics of the State of Chihuahua in National Perspective. September 1990-June 1991.

Denise Dresser, Ph.D. candidate, Princeton University. Economic Liberalization and Political Coalitions in Mexico. September 1990-June 1991.

Leopoldo Gomex, Instituto Tecnológico Autonomo de Mexico. Electoral Processes, Political Legitimacy, and Regime Change in Mexico, 1977-1988. January-June 1991.

Blanca Heredia, El Colegio de Mexico and Ph.D. candidate, Columbia University. The Sources and Limits of State Power in Mexico: The Crusade Against Inflation, 1982-1988. January-June 1991.

Thomas Kelly, Ph.D. candidate in international relations, Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. Legal and Institutional Approaches to Transboundary Environment Management: A Case Study of the San Deigo-Tijuana Border Region. September 1990-June 1991.

Kevin Middlebrook, Indiana University. Organized Labor and the State in Postrevolutionary Mexico. December 1990-June 1991.

Juan Molinar Horcasitas, Universidad Nacional Autonoma de Mexico; Ph.D. candidate, University of Caliifornia, San Diego. Mexican Electoral Behavior in Comparative Perspective. September 1989-June 1991.

Jeffrey Weldon, Ph.D. candidate, University of California, San Diego. Impacts of the 1986 U.S. Immigration Law on Mexican Sending Communities. September 1990-June 1991.

Van Whiting, Brown University and Swarthmore College. Policymaking on Protection of Intellectual Property: A Comparison of Mexico, Brazil, and India. September 1990-June 1991.

In addition, the following political scientists will be guest scholars in residence at the Center during 1990-91:

Steven Diamond, Ph.D. candidate, Harvard University. Implications of a U.S.-Mexico Free Trade Agreement for Organized Labor. September 1989-June 1991.

Luiz Orenstein, Ph.D. candidate, Instituto Universitario de Pesquisas do Rio de Janeiro. Macroeconomic Policies and Political Networks: A Formal Model of Distribution Patterns. January 1990-December 1991.

Judith Teichman, University of Toronto. The Mexican State and Economic Crises: Restructuring the Parastate Sector. September-December 1990.

Dirksen Congressional Center

Sixteen scholars, writers, researchers, and graduate students recently received grants totaling $20,000 through the Dirksen Center's congressional research grants program. All grants are used to advance studies of the United States Congress and congressional leadership.

The annual deadline for applications is March 31, and any serious researcher with a topic related to the U.S. Congress may apply for funding from: Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, Broadway and Fourth Street, Pekin, IL 61554.

1990 Recipients

Charles W. Calhoun, Ph.D., East Carolina University, "Congressional Leaders and Republican Party Ideology in the Late 19th Century;"

Karl E. Campbell, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, "Senator Sam Ervin and the Road to Watergate;"

James M. Cannon, freelance writer, Washington, DC, "How Congress Shaped Ford the Man and Minority Leader, and Ford the President;"

Taylor Dark, The Brookings Institution, "Congressional Leadership and the Role of Interest Groups: The Case of Organized Labor;"

Diana Evans, Ph.D., Trinity College, "The Impact of Committee and Subcommittee Leaders on Interest Group Policy Success;"

Douglas Freeman, Ph.D., and Ray Young, Ph.D., Valdosta State College, "Information Quality, Congressional Leadership, and Foreign Policy Decision Making;"

Robert A. Goldberg, Ph.D., University of Utah, "Barry Goldwater and the Shaping of Modern America;"

John Jacobs, San Francisco Examiner and University of California at Berkeley, "The Life and Times of Congressman Phillip Burton;"

Frederick M. Kaiser, Congressional Research Service, "Changing Roles of a Congressional Committee Chairman: 'Doc' Morgan of the House Foreign Affairs Committee;"

Robin Kolodny, The Johns Hopkins University, "The Role of the Congressional Campaign Committees in Party Development and Leadership Selection in Congress;"

David W. Rohde, Ph.D., Michigan State University, "Party Leadership and Intraparty Cohesion Among House Democrats;"

Melvin T. Steely, Ph.D., West Georgia College, "Unplanned and Unexpected: A Study of How Unplanned and Unexpected Change Occurred in the Leadership of Both Parties in the U.S. House of Representatives in the Spring of 1989;"

Duane Tananbaum, Ph.D., Lehman College, The City University of New York, "Congress Versus the President: from Roosevelt to Reagan;"

Eric M. Uslander, Ph.D., University of Maryland, "Do Leaders Lead?"

Robert F. Zeidel, Ph.D., St. Cloud State University, "Congressional Leadership and the Creation of United States Immigration Commission."

Fund for Research on Dispute Resolution

The following political scientists have received grants from the Fund for Dispute Resolution. Grants are awarded semi-annually. For further information: Juliana Birkhoff, Fund for Research on Dispute Resolution, 1901 L Street NW, Suite 600, Washington, D.C. 20036. Phone: (202) 785-4637.

March 1990 Recipients

Herbert Jacob, Northwestern University—a $65,092 grant to examine the effects of "bargaining in the shadow of the law" in the context of divorce negotiations.

Neghin Modavi, University of Hawaii—a $15,000 grant to develop case studies of environmental land use disputes in Hawaii examining the nature and impact of state intervention.

James Perry, Indiana University—a $42,988 grant to study what happens when employees "blow the whistle" on their employers' illegal or illegitimate practices by initiating a complaint.

Hoover Presidential Library Association

Seventeen individuals were named Hoover Scholars for 1990 by the Fellowship and Grant Committee of the Hoover Presidential Library Association, Inc. The following political scientists were selected as fellows.

John Maltese, University of Georgia. The Selling of Supreme Court Nominees: Politics and the Senate Confirmation Process.

Taifu Yu, University of Northern Iowa. Herbert Hoover and China, 1899-1933.

Midwest Political Science Association

The following individuals received awards for papers presented at the 1989 Midwest Political Science Association meeting.

Sophonisba Breckenridge Award (for best paper on women and politics): Aili Mari Tripp, Northwestern University, for "The Informal Economy, Labor and the State in Tanzania."

Brooks-Cole Award (for best paper written by a graduate student): Dan Palazzola, University of Virginia, for "Role of the Speaker of the House in the Budget Process."

Pi Sigma Alpha Award (for best paper at the meeting): Richard Hall, University of Michigan, and Frank Wyman, University of Michigan, Dearborn, for "Political Action Committees and Committee Decision-Making."

National Research Council Minority Scholars

Fellowships have been awarded for 1990 to 118 minority scholars in two Ford Foundation programs. Information and applications for the 1990 fellowship competition is available from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue NW, Washington, D.C. 20418. The political science fellows are listed below.

Predoctoral Fellows

Regina M. Freer, University of Michigan.

Thomas Longoria, Texas A&M University.

Dissertation Fellows

Ruth Iyob, University of California, Santa Barbara.

Martin R. Saiz, University of Colorado, Boulder.

Postdoctoral Fellow

Dwayne Woods. Chosen institution: Ecole en Science Social, France.

Pew Faculty Fellowships

The following have received Pew Faculty Fellowships in International Affairs for 1990-91.

Suresht R. Bald, associate professor of political science, Willamette University.

Dan Caldwell, professor of political science, Pepperdine University.

Elizabeth Doherty, assistant professor of government, Smith College.

Vincent Auger, instructor in government; Alan W. Cafruny, assistant professor of government; Stephen W. Orvis, assistant professor of government, Hamilton College (joint fellowship).

Grant T. Hammond, professor of international relations, Air War College.

Wendy L. Hansen, assistant professor of political science, State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Michael Hemesath, assistant professor of economics, Carleton College.

Ole R. Holsti, George V. Allen Professor of International Affairs, Duke University.

Robert J. Janosik, associate professor and chair of political science, Occidental College.

Robert Thomas Kudrle, professor, Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs, University of Minnesota.

James M. Lindsay, assistant professor of political science, University of Iowa.

William J. Long, assistant professor of international relations, The American University.

Richard L. Lucier, professor of economics, Denison University.

Brian S. Mandell, assistant professor, Norman Paterson School of International Affairs, Carleton University.

Louis L. Ortmyer, professor of political science, Davidson College.

Edward J. Rhodes, assistant professor of international relations, Rutgers University.

Amita Shastri, assistant professor of political science, San Francisco State University.

Martin Jay Sherwin, Walter S. Dickson Professor of History, Tufts University.

Catherine M. Sokil, assistant professor of economics, Middlebury College.

Abiodun Williams, assistant professor of international relations, School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University.

Ralph Bunche Fellowship Awards

The Ralph Bunche Institute on the United Nations has instituted a fellowship program for minority doctoral students studying international affairs at the Graduate School and University Center of the City University of New York. The Ralph Bunche Fellowship Program was initiated several years ago to honor the memory of Ralph J. Bunche, international statesman, the first black recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize, and former president of APSA. For further details, see "Research and Training Support" in this issue of PS.

The six Ralph Bunche Fellows during the 1990-91 academic year are:

Judith A. Duncker, an honors graduate of Rutgers University with an M.A. from Fordham University, in her third year of doctoral study; Hollis France-Williams, a graduate of Jersey City State College and APSA Summer Institute participant (1989), in her first year of doctoral study; Rhonda L. Johnson, a graduate of Clarion University of Pennsylvania with an M.S. in Library Sciences from Clarion also, in her first year of doctoral study; Sylvia R. Maldonado, a graduate of the University of Puerto Rico, Rio Piedras Campus with high honors in sociology in her second year of doctoral study; Ronald A. Milon, a graduate of the State University of New York at Brockport with an M.A. in History from SUNY-Buffalo, in his second year of doctoral study; Timothy A. Rainey, a Magna Cum Laude graduate of Morgan State University with an M.A. and M.S. from Georgetown University, in his first year of doctoral study.

Russell Sage Foundation

The Russell Sage Foundation has announced the appointment of 12 visiting scholars for the 1990-91 academic year. Following are the political scientists, with their home affiliations, and the topics of their research.

Jagdish Bhagwati, Columbia University. U.S. immigration and refugee policy, particularly the failure of employer sanctions to stem the flow of illegal immigrants.

Ira Katznelson, New School for Social Research. Changes in American economic and social policy from the end of the second New Deal to the election of Eisenhower.

Gary Mucciaroni, New York University. Why interest group politics have managed to block political reforms in some areas, such as agriculture and trade policy, while in other areas, such as taxation and regulation, reforms have been successfully achieved.

Margaret Weir, Harvard University. Impact of market oriented economic restructuring in Britain and the U.S. on the social isolation of the poor.

U.S. Institute of Peace

The following grants, totaling $565,000 were made by the U.S. Institute of Peace in April 1990.

Boise State University, Boise, Idaho (Gregory Raymond, Project Director): A grant to support a study of regime-type in relation to success or failure of international arbitration and mediation. $10,000.

Center for Strategic and International Studies, Washington, D.C. (Robert Hunter, Project Director): A grant to support research on restructuring the European regional security system. $30,000.

Clemson University, The Strom Thurmond Institute, Clemson, South Carolina (Edward Hamilton, Project Director): A grant to conduct a two-week summer course on arms control and international security for secondary school social science teachers. $20,000.

Fuller, Graham, The RAND Corporation, Santa Monica, California: A grant to support examination of democracy in Egypt and the relevance of the Egyptian experience to stability and the resolution of conflicts, internal and external, throughout the Arab World. $20,000.

George Mason University, Fairfax, Virginia (Bui Diem and Nguyen Hung, Project Directors): A grant to support the continuation of a study on negotiations between the U.S. and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (North Vietnam) during the Vietnam War. $15,000.

Hampshire College, Program in Peace and World Securities Studies (Michael Klare and William Taubman, Project Directors): A grant to conduct a college faculty workshop on the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, and on evolving Soviet-American relations. $15,000.

Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts (Roger Fisher, Project Director): A grant to conduct a workshop on negotiation and conflict resolution for NATO and Warsaw Pact diplomats stationed in the United States. $20,000.

Institute for Peace Studies, Billings, Montana (Don Petterson, Project Director): A grant to support development of a peace studies program through acquisition of basic library materials. $15,000.

Iowa Peace Institute, Grinnel, Iowa (John MacDonald, Project Director): A grant to support development of a library and media resources center through the acquisition of books and videotapes on conflict management, global education, world trade and international development. $20,000.

Mississippi State University, Center for International Security and Strategic Studies, Mississippi State, Mississippi (Janos Radvanyi, Project Director): A grant to support the extension of the Mississippi State University Program on Peace, Conflict Resolution and International Security Studies to the University of Alabama in Birmingham, and the University of Arkansas in Little Rock. $50,000.

Mount Vernon College, Washington, D.C. (Paul Bennett, Project Director): A grant to support investigation of new Soviet research on international negotiation. $10,000.

National Institute for Citizen

Participation and Negotiation, San Francisco, California (Raymond Shonholtz, Project Director): A grant to support a cooperative effort with the Polish Ministry of Education and the University of Warsaw to develop an Institute for Participatory Conflict Management in Warsaw. $35,000.

National Institute for Public Policy, Fairfax, Virginia (Robert Rudney and Marian Leighton, Project Directors): A grant to support a study of Soviet and West German concepts of non-offensive defense and common security. $20,000.

New Hampshire Council on World Affairs, Durham, New Hampshire (David Larson, Project Director): A continuation grant in support of workshops for high school social science teachers to enhance the quality of instruction in world affairs. $10,000.

Pacific Forum, Honolulu, Hawaii (Richard L. Grant, Project Director): A grant in support of a workshop of scholars and practitioners from policy institutes in the Asia-Pacific region. $30,000.

Pacific Futures Development Center, Manila, Republic of Philippines (Wilhelm Ortaliz, Cecilio Chan and Hernani Jover, Project Directors): A grant to support a study of approaches to the peaceful resolution of contentious issues of sovereignty and compensation between the United States and the Philippines. $30,000.

Ranger, Robin, Chevy Chase, Maryland: A grant to support the continuation of a study on the effectiveness of compliance policy for bilateral and multilateral arms control agreements in the evolving international security environment of the 1990s. $15,000.

United Nations Association of Berkeley, Berkeley, California (Carol Mosher, Project Director): A grant to support development of a film library emphasizing the U.N.'s functional role in achieving world peace. $10,000.

University of California, Davis, California (Mark Wheelis, Project Director): A grant to support examination of verification provisions that may strengthen the 1972 Biological Weapons Convention. $20,000.

University of Hawaii Foundation, Honolulu, Hawaii (R. J. Rummell, Project Director): A grant to continue development of a coded database for the purpose of examining cases of twentieth-century genocide, politicide, massacres, and other intentional killing, particularly in the Soviet Union, the Peoples' Republic of China, and the Republic of China. $25,000.

University of Hawaii Institute for Peace, Honolulu, Hawaii (Stephen Uhalley, Project Director): A grant to conduct the second in a series of conferences: The Asia-Pacific Dialogue, focusing on the continuing conflict within Cambodia, and on the conflict between North and South Korea. $25,000.

University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan (Zvi Gitelman, Ronald Suny, and Roman Szporluk, Project Directors): A grant to conduct and publish the proceedings of a conference on ethnic conflict in the USSR and its implications for international peace and stability. $25,000.

Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee (Arthur Demarest, Project Director): A grant to support a study of the system of conflict control during the period of the Kingdom of the Maya in Central America. $10,000.

Washington Institute for Near East Policy, Washington, D.C. (Patrick Clawson, Project Director): A grant to support a study of the economic consequences and impact on Israel, Jordan, and the Palestinians of current proposals in the Palestinian-Israeli peace process. $20,000.

West Virginia University, Morgantown, West Virginia (Sophia Peterson, Project Director): A grant to conduct a workshop for college instructors on global cooperation, focusing on peace and security, as well as environmental and North-South issues. $10,000.

Whittier College, Whittier, California (Joyce Kaufman, Project Director): A grant to support the continuation of computer-aided international negotiation simulation project for undergraduate students including a simulation with a Pacific Basin emphasis. $40,000.

Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut (James Sutterlin, Project Director): A grant to examine how the risk of regional war can be reduced through more effective use of multilateral organizations. $15,000.

The following solicited grant awards were made in 1990 for projects on Eastern Europe and Latin America:

American University, Washington, D.C. (Louis W. Goodman, Project Director): A grant to permit the continuation of a series on civil-military relations in Latin America. $30,000.

Aspen Institute, Washington, D.C. (Richard Nuccio, Project Director): A grant to support research on issues challenging the consolidation of democratic governance in Colombia, El Salvador, Guatemala, and Peru. $40,000.

Center for Strategic and International Studies, Washington, D.C. (Georges Fauriol, Project Director): A grant to support research on the implications for U.S. policy of recent events in Panama. $30,000.

Centro Peruano de Estudios Internacionales (CEPEI), Lima, Peru (Alejandro Deustua Caravedo, Project Director): A grant to support research on drug-trafficking as a security and foreign policy issue in Peru. $30,000.

Foreign Policy Research Institute, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania (Rensselaer W. Lee III, Project Director): A grant to analyze various approaches to the problem of the cocaine trade in Colombia and elsewhere in the Andes. $30,000.

Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts (Nicholas Eberstadt, Project Director): A grant to examine the lessons of the U.S. experience with foreign aid policy in the post-World War II period that may be of relevance to newly initiated and impending U.S. aid programs in Central and Eastern Europe. $25,000.

Inter-American Security Educational Institute, Washington, D.C. (Paul Behrends, Project Director): A grant to support research on the effectiveness of the existing inter-American security system to deal with new security threats to the Western Hemisphere. $40,000.

International Institute for Strategic Studies, London, England (Hans Binnendijk, Project Director): A grant to survey, identify, catalogue, and analyze potential subnational and international threats to the evolution of democracy in Eastern Europe. $30,000.

Johns Hopkins University, School for Advanced International Studies, Washington, D.C. (Simon Serfaty, Project Director): A grant to survey the history of civil-military relations in Central America, including previous attempts to establish a regional security regime, and to analyze the present situation in each of the republics. $15,000.

Korvig, Bennett, Toronto, Canada: A grant to support research on recent Western European political initiatives designed to facilitate the consolidation of liberal democracy, the rule of law, human rights, and free communication in the former socialist countries of Eastern Europe. $30,000.

Malamud-Goti, Jaime, Buenos Aires, Argentina: A grant to support research on democratic institutions and human rights policies during periods of transition from dictatorship to democracy. The project will focus on the responses of the Argentine judiciary and military to the transitional policies of the Alfonsín and Menem governments from 1983 through 1990. $30,000.

Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wisconsin (Michael Fleet and Brian Smith, Project Directors): A grant to support research on the role of the Roman Catholic Church in the transition from military to civilian rule and the development of democratic institutions and practices in Chile and Peru. $22,000.

Programa de Seguimiento de las Políticas Exteriores Latinoamericanas (PROSPEL), Santiago, Chile (Heraldo Muñoz and Boris Yopo, Project Directors): A grant to analyze and compare the principal aspects of the defense policies of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Venezuela. $30,000.

Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey (James Turner Johnson, Project Director): A grant to support research on five problem areas for the development of Polish local democracy. $30,000.

Stanford University, Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace (Richard Starr, Project Director): A grant to support research on the future of political, security and economic relations between the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. $18,000.

Union of Concerned Scientists, Washington, D.C. (Jonathan Dean, Project Director): A grant to support research on long-term U.S. security needs in Europe in light of the ongoing collapse of Soviet hegemony in Eastern Europe. $25,000.

University of Sheffield, Sheffield, England (Anthony Payne, Project Director): A grant to support a study of Caribbean regional security from the perspective of the small, democratic, independent states in the region. $20,000.

University of Colorado, Boulder, Colorado (J. Samuel Fitch, Project Director): A grant to support research on the interplay of political ideology, military doctrine, and perceptions of the domestic and international context in shaping the beliefs of the military in Argentina and Ecuador about their role in politics. $15,000.

Yeshiva University, Benjamin Cardozo School of Law, New York, New York (Stephen Marks, Project Director): A grant to support a conference of American and Soviet legal scholars on expanding and strengthening the rule of law in the Soviet Union. $15,000.

Bremont, Marshall, Portsmouth, Rhode Island: A grant to support research on prospects for fundamentally changing the U.S.-Soviet relationship from one of hostility to one of cooperation, especially over disputes in the Third World. $33,000.

Other Awards and Honors

G. Pope Atkins, professor of political science, U.S. Naval Academy, was awarded the Middle Atlantic Conference on Latin American Studies (MACLAS) Arthur P. Whitaker Prize for 1990 for his book, Latin America in the International Political System (Westview Press, 1989).

Thomas E. Cronin, McHugh Professor of American Institutions and Leadership at the Colorado College was selected as Teacher of the Year in May by the Colorado College Campus Association.

Robert S. Erikson has been named a Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of Houston.

Christopher H. Foreman, Jr., The Brookings Institution, received the D. B. Hardeman Prize for his book, Signals from the Hill: Congressional Oversight and the Challenge of Social Regulation (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1988). The prize was given by the Lyndon Johnson Library for the best book on the 20th-century Congress for the 1987-88 period.

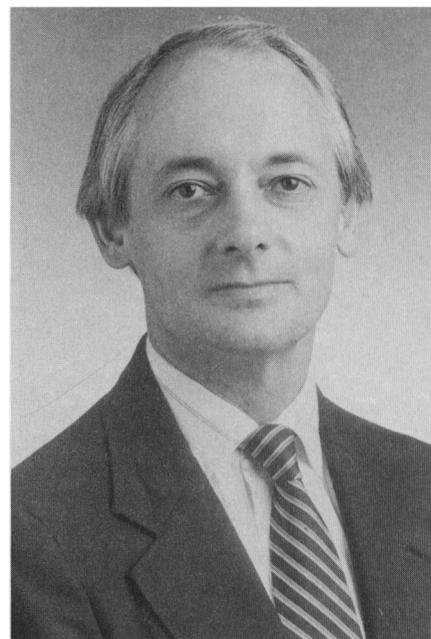

Mark Gibney, Purdue University, was selected as the Outstanding Teacher in the School of Liberal Arts for 1990. Gibney also has received a Fulbright Research Award at the Institute for Human Rights in Oslo, Norway.

James L. Gibson has been named a Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of Houston.

David J. Hadley, professor of political science and department chair at Wabash College, received a Lilly Endowment Faculty Open Fellowship for the 1990-91 academic year. While on the fellowship he will serve as Senior Governor's Fellow on the legislative relations staff of Indiana Governor Evan Bayh.

Loch K. Johnson has been named Regents professor at the University of Georgia. Johnson has also won the 1990 Creative Research Medal awarded by the University.

Michael Klonsinski, University of Texas, Austin, received the best graduate student paper award for the 1989 convention from the Southwestern Political Science Association for "Local Newspaper Reporting of Business Events: Evidence of Politically Induced Media Business Cycles."

Loch Johnson

Ola Listhaug, University of Trondheim, Norway, is the recipient of a Fulbright Fellowship and research awards from the American-Scandinavian Foundation and the Norwegian Research Council for Science and the Humanities. He will be a visiting scholar at the department of political science, University of Iowa for the fall term 1990 and at the department of political science, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, for the spring of 1991.

Kenneth J. Meier, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, received the Clarence A. Kulp award from the American Risk and Insurance Association for his book The Political Economy of Regulation: The Case of Insurance (SUNY Press, 1988). This award is given for a recent book that makes "an outstanding contribution to the literature on risk and insurance."

William F. S. Miles, assistant professor of political science at Northeastern University in Boston, has been awarded a Fulbright Senior Research Fellowship under the Pacific Isles Research Program. He will spend six months in Vanuatu investigating the developmental implications of the Anglo-French colonial condominium in the New Hebrides.

Ilan Peleg has been named as

Susette M. Talarico

Charles A. Dana Professor of Government and Law, Lafayette College.

William Rudnick, University of Notre Dame, received the best undergraduate paper award from the Southwestern Political Science Association for "Alternative Selection Shapes the Policy Agenda: Star Wars and the Arms Control Association."

Steven Sanderson, University of Florida, has received a five-year grant of $1.2 million from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation. The grant will sponsor the activities of the Program in Biological Conservation and Sustainable Development, which Sanderson codirects.

John Spanier, University of Florida, has received a Fulbright Award to lecture at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem in spring 1991.

Clarence Stone, University of Maryland, College Park, has received the Ralph J. Bunche Award for the best scholarly work in political science exploring the phenomenon of ethnic and cultural pluralism for Regime Politics: Governing Atlanta 1946-1988 (University Press of Kansas).

Susette M. Talarico, professor of political science, University of Georgia, received the University's 1990 Josiah Meigs Award for Excellence in Teaching. She also won that award in 1986.

Kenneth Wald, University of Florida, has received a Fulbright Award to lecture at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem for the 1990-91 academic year.

David B. Walker will be on a Fulbright Professorship September 1990-June 1991 with the Seminar for Political Science at the George-August University at Gottingen, West Germany.

Quansheng Zhao (East-West Center/Old Dominion University) has recently been appointed Peace Fellow by the United States Institute of Peace, Washington, DC, where he will conduct a project on Chinese foreign policy. Zhao has also received the 4th Pacific Basin Academic Grant from the Ohira Memorial Foundation (Japan) for his research on the Japanese experience and East Asian political development.

In Memoriam

M. Glenn Abernathy

Glenn Abernathy, Distinguished Professor Emeritus of Government and International Studies at The University of South Carolina, died June 5, 1990, at the Chippenham Hospital, Richmond, Virginia, after suffering a stroke while visiting his son and daughter-in-law. He was sixty-eight and resided in Columbia, South Carolina.

Born in Birmingham, Alabama, he was a graduate of Birmingham Southern College and took his M.A. in public administration at the University of Alabama. He obtained his Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin where he specialized in constitutional law and studied under David Fellman.

During World War II, Glenn was an Air Force captain, serving as a meteorologist from 1942 to 1946. After the war he was assistant city manager of Mountain Brook, Alabama, and taught a year at the University of Alabama. Later he was a visiting professor at the University of Wisconsin and the University of Southampton in England.

He joined the faculty of the University of South Carolina in 1951 and served in the department of government and international studies until his retirement in 1986. He held the Olin D. Johnston Chair of Political Science at that time.

His major field of interest was constitutional and administrative law, and he specialized in civil liberties, especially the First Amendment and the right of assembly and association. His leading publications included the Right of Assembly and Association, The Organization and Jurisdiction of the Courts of South Carolina, Civil Liberties Under the Constitution and The Carter Years, of which he was the American editor and co-author. At the time of his death, Glenn was working on a textbook on administrative law and had only shortly before finished revisions of the 5th edition of his authoritative textbook on civil liberties and the constitution.

In his 35 years at South Carolina, he was recipient of the Russell Award for Creative Research; Director of the Bureau of Government Research and Services, AAUP Faculty Citizen of the Year, the first chair of the faculty senate and of the Faculty Tenure and Promotion Committee. He also chaired numerous departmental and university search committees and was an outstanding teacher of constitutional law and American political theory.

His many services to the profession included chairing nominating committees of the Southern Political Science Association, being president of the U.S.C. and South Carolina chapters of AAUP and organizing and participating on numerous panels of the American Political Science Association, the Midwestern Political Science Association, and the Southern Political Science Association.

Glenn was a gentleman and a scholar in the truest sense of those words and fully embodied those trinitarian values of academic life—teaching, scholarship, and service. A genuine role model for his colleagues, his students and his profession, he will be sorely missed by members of his department, university, and discipline.

Contributions in memory of M. Glenn Abernathy may be sent to: Glenn Abernathy Memorial Fund, c/o Department of Government and International Studies, University of South Carolina, Columbia, South