

Politics and Literature

The Best Paper Award is given for the best paper on politics and literature delivered at the previous APSA Annual Meeting. The 1999 prize went to Paul Cantor of the University of Virginia for "The Simpsons: Atomistic Politics and the Nuclear Family."

Domestic Sources of Foreign Policy

The Best Paper Award was won by Richard Sinnott from University College, Dublin for his work, "Knowledge and the Position of Attitudes to a European Foreign and Security Policy on the Real-to-Random Continuum." The award is presented for the best paper on domestic sources of foreign policy presented at the previous APSA Annual Meeting.

Elections, Public Opinion and Voting Behavior

Stan Humphries of the University of Virginia took home the 1999 Best Paper Award for "The Impact of Economic Structure on Social Capital and Civic Engagement." The Philip E. Converse Book Award for an outstanding book in the field published at least five years before went to Anthony Downs of The Brookings Institution for his book, An Economic Theory of Democracy (Harper and Row, 1957). The Emerging Scholar Award, for the top scholar in the field who is within 10 years of her or his Ph.D., went to Wendy Rahn of the University of Minnesota.

Race, Ethnicity and Politics

The Organized Section on Race, Ethnicity and Politics presented a number of awards, including three book prizes. The Best Book Award on the Social Construction of Race went to Matthew Frye Jacobson of Yale University for Whiteness of a Different Color: European Immigrants and the Alchemy of Race (Harvard University Press, 1998). The Best Book Award on Racial Identity went to Andra Y. Simpson, University of Washington, for her book, The Tie that Binds: Identity and Political Attitudes in the Post-Civil Rights Generation (New York University Press, 1998). The Best Book Award on Intersections of Race and Gender was awarded to Luana Ross of the University of California, Davis for Inventing the Savage: The Social Construction of Native American Criminality (University of Texas Press, 1998). The Best Book Award on Ethnic Political Incorporation was presented to Michael Jones-Correa of Harvard University for Between Two Nations: The Political Predicament of Latinos in New York City (Cornell University Press, 1998).

Scholars Attend IU Conference

Drawn together by their common research interests in children and adolescent issues, 13 scholars from various U.S. universities, colleges, and academic institutions came together at Indiana University this August for "Multidisciplinary Pathways to Children's Learning, Development and Transitions to Adulthood." Dr. Yvette Alex-Assensoh, an assistant professor of political science at Indiana and a former Ralph Bunche Summer Institute scholar, organized the three-day conference.

Funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF), the conference attracted political scientists, economists, cultural anthropologists, sociologists, and a nursing instructor.

Participants presented papers on and discussed the plethora of factors that promote and impede educational attainment and development among American youth. Specifically, participants addressed transitions to adulthood, school-related processes and education, and politics and competing models of educational reform. A highlight of the conference was a town meeting at which members of the local school board, principals, teachers, former university students and local government officials discussed the increased severity of and apparent increase in the frequency of violence at school.

Scholars at NSF-Funded Conference at IU. (R-L) Top Row: Richard Niemi, University of Rochester; Michael Cohen, Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis; Kenneth Wong, University of Chicago; David Figlio, University of Florida; Kenneth Meier, Texas A & M University; Mark Schneider, SUNY-Stony Brook; and Thomas Huberty, Indiana University. Bottom Row: Elizabeth Smith, Furman University; Melissa Marschall, University of South Carolina; Bradley Levinson, Indiana University; Michael Shanahan, Pennsylvania State University; Robert Smith, Barnard College; and Yvette Alex-Assensoh, Indiana University.

OMB Finalizes Rules on Data Sharing

True to the timetable it set for itself, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) has issued final rules governing public access to federally funded research data. The rules flesh out language inserted by Senator Richard Shelby (R-AL) in the Fiscal Year 1999 Omnibus Appropriations Bill (Public Law 105-277) that directed OMB to amend Section 36 of Circular A-110 "to require Federal awarding agencies to ensure that all data produced under an award will be made available to the public through the procedures established under the Freedom of Information Act."

After two comment periods, the final rules clarify ambiguities within the original legislation regarding the definitions of data, published research, use by the federal government in developing policy and rules, and cost reimbursement. The new rules do not vary significantly from the draft text developed for the second comment period.

The rules grant the federal government the right "to obtain, reproduce, publish or otherwise use data first produced under an award" and to authorize others to receive and use such data. The data in question is research data used by the federal government in developing "an agency action that has the force and effect of law." OMB thus rejected a more expansive interpretation of the scope of the rules, one that would have included data used in agencies' internal discussions but not directly cited in the preamble of new regulations.

"Published" research data is not limited to that published in peer-reviewed journals and can include prepublished research findings cited by a federal agency. Senators Shelby, Trent Lott (R-MS), and Ben Nighthorse Campbell (R-CO) opposed efforts to restrict the definition of data to findings published in a peer-reviewed journal.

The new rules exempt certain research data including those "protected under the law," meaning data subject to copyright and patent laws. The new language also excludes "[p]ersonnel and medical information and similar information the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, such as information that could be used to identify a particular person in a research study."

During the second comment period, OMB solicited opinions on limiting the scope of the new rules to research data relevant to regulations having "the most substantial impact on society," which was understood to mean regulations meeting a $100 million "impact threshold." The economic threshold would have all but excluded political science research from the provisions of the new rules. Regrettably, the threshold was not incorporated into the final language.

The final OMB rules are a significant improvement over the original legislation and the first draft of the amended section and reflect the work of the research community including the Consortium of Social Science Association and APSA. How much of a chilling effect, if any, the rules will have on political science research remains to be seen, but the adequacy of the confidentiality protections incorporated in the new rules and existing procedures of the Freedom of Information Act bear watching.

APSA will continue to monitor the implementation of the new rules and keep members informed of issues as they arise. For the most complete developments visit APSANet at www.apsanet.org/new/omb/.

Nominations Sought for 2000 APSA Awards

Nominations are invited for APSA Career and Dissertation Awards to be presented at the 2000 Annual Meeting, August 31-September 2, in Washington, DC.

Departments are invited to submit nominations for dissertation prizes, although not more than one per award. Dissertations eligible are those completed and accepted during the past two academic years. Department submissions should be sent to each member of the award committee and include a letter of nomination and a copy of the dissertation. A copy of the nomination letter ONLY should be sent to the APSA national office. Departments must submit their nominations by January 15, 2000.

Individuals are also invited to submit, for consideration, letters of nomination for APSA-sponsored Career Awards. Career Awards are decided upon by three-member committees appointed by the president and approved by the Council. The deadline for submission of letters is February 1, 2000.
