CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS ISSUE

J.W. HEXTER is currently Distinguished Historian-in-Residence at Washington University, Charles J. Stille Professor of History Emeritus at Yale University, and Director of the Yale Center for Parliamentary History. He has written The Reign of King Pym, More's Utopia: The Biography of an Idea, Reappraisals in History, and several other works, the most recent of which is On Historians. He is preparing a study, "The First Crisis of Modern Liberty."

W.R. JONES is Professor of History at the University of New Hampshire. He has published previously in J.B.S. on medieval English church history and legal history, and at present he is working on a study of church courts and diocesan administration in the archbishopric of Armagh during the later middle ages.

JOAN K. KINNAIRD is Professor of History at Trinity College, Washington, D.C. She now is working on a study of late seventeenth-century feminists.

WILLIAM G. PALMER is a doctoral candidate at the University of Maine at Orono. His dissertation is titled "The Political Career of Oliver St. John, 1637-1649."

JOHN A. PHILLIPS is Assistant Professor of History at the University of California at Riverside. He is the author of a forthcoming book on unreformed English electoral behavior. His current areas of research include the Great Reform Act, 1818-1841, the later Stuart poor law, and social and physical mobility in eighteenth-century England.

ANDREW W. ROSEN is the author of Rise Up, Women!; The Militant Campaign of the Women's Social and Political Union, 1903-1914 (1974), which won the 1979 C.B.S. book prize. At present he is doing research on spinsters, widows, and the women's movement, 1850-1867.

JOEL T. ROSENTHAL is Professor of History at the State University of New York, Stony Brook. He has published books and articles on Anglo-Saxon and fifteenth-century England and currently is completing the C.B.S. bibliography volume on the Anglo-Saxons.

ANTHONY SALERNO received a Ph.D. in English History from the University of Virginia in May 1977. Currently he is researching patterns and aspects of seventeenth-century migration in the west of England, as well as regional variations in the age at first marriage during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.
