CALL FOR PAPERS

PERFORMANCE: MODERN AND POSTMODERN

For a special issue (or issues), Theatre Survey invites essays considering how twentieth-century performances, modern and postmodern, have put the “classics” into play, essays that theorize and clarify modern and/or postmodern theatrical practices. We take “classic” to embrace the familiar landmarks of the Western canon, from the Greeks through Beckett, Brecht, and beyond—and of the Eastern canon, as well as intercultural intersections between. Essays should engage specific productions directly but in ways that move beyond performance reconstruction to theorize and clarify the underlying forces of cultural production; essays should bring performances into dialogue with broader cultural and historical concerns.

Among the many questions that might be addressed: What is the place of “text” in modernist or postmodernist performance practice? What claims did modernist production make? What is the cultural (ideological, political) “work” of modernist or postmodernist “classics” in production? Who controls such production of the “classics?” What are the characteristics of the language of modernist scene design? How does the postmodern scenic vocabulary differ? What are the politics, the aesthetics of the Western postmodern appropriation of Eastern theatre practices?

Essays must be received by January 1, 1997.

Submit three copies, prepared according to the Chicago Manual of Style, 14th Edition, to either of the editors for this project:

THEATRE RESEARCH INTERNATIONAL

Edited by Claude Schumacher, Glasgow University

Theatre Research International publishes original articles on world theatre. Its focus is broad, highlighting such areas as theory and practice in the history of theatre, performance theory and analysis, theatre aesthetics, and new developments in theatre research.

The journal carries reviews of the most important studies in the field. It provides both a medium of communication for scholars, and a service to students of art, architecture, design, music, and drama literature.

THE AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR THEATRE RESEARCH

The American Society for Theatre Research (ASTR) was founded in 1956 to encourage theatre scholarship and to provide a link with other similar groups represented in the International Federation for Theatre Research. The ASTR is the only American theatre organization affiliated with the American Council of Learned Societies and the International Federation for Theatre Research (IFTR/FIRT). In 1967 the ASTR was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey as a nonprofit corporation. In informal correspondence, the society is referred to as "ASTR."

Theatre Survey, the official journal of ASTR, is published biannually in May and in November. The ASTR annual meeting occurs in the fall of each year. Inquiries about ASTR, including membership, should be sent to
