A SURVEY OF THE ANCIENT MONUMENTS OF THE COUNTY OF LONDON

THE TOWER OF LONDON, Southwark Cathedral, Eltham Palace, Charlton House, and the Royal Hospital and Royal Observatory at Greenwich are amongst the buildings described in the fifth volume devoted to the County of London by the Royal Commission on Historical Monuments entitled 'EAST LONDON'.

These notable monuments have been illustrated with a fulness of detail which has not before been attempted. The remarkable series of plates showing the prisoners' inscriptions in the Tower, the fine collection of monuments at Southwark Cathedral and the interior views of important houses such as Charlton House and Eltham Lodge are worthy of especial note amongst the 400 illustrations and plans contained in this book.

As the concluding volume of the series, this work is brought to a special and fitting finish by summaries of various aspects of art and architecture relating to the whole London district. These summaries deal with its sculpture, its ancient glass, its heraldry, its brasses and its building materials, and with the special features which help to distinguish the reign of Queen Anne (the limit of investigation) from the age of the Georges who followed her.

A biographical interlude entitled 'Warriors Dead' contributed by Mr. E. V. Lucas yields a more personal impression of the monuments than is possible within the confines of the Inventory.

*Demy Quarto, Cloth, pp. xlviii + 149. 193 plates.
