Journal of the Society for American Music

Journal of the Society for American Music (JSAM) is an international, peer-reviewed journal that explores all aspects of American music and music in the Americas. JSAM is dedicated to supporting scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries, cutting across historical musicology, music theory, ethnomusicology, cultural theory, and American studies. JSAM encourages international dialogue across disciplines. The journal features articles, reviews of books, recordings, and multimedia items, and explorations of special topics.

Emily Abrams Ansari is Assistant Professor of Music History at the University of Western Ontario in Canada, specializing in the politics of twentieth-century American art music. She gained her Ph.D. from Harvard University in 2010. Her book, currently in progress, explores the use of American classical music as a weapon of psychological warfare under President Eisenhower in relation to the fraught politics of the “Americanist” musical style. Recent publications have appeared in this journal and Diplomatic History.

Robert C. Cook teaches music theory at the University of Iowa. His recent work includes a study of George Crumb’s Apparition for Music Theory Spectrum and a chapter in the Oxford Handbook of Neo-Riemannian Music Theories.

Andrew Flory is Assistant Professor of Music at Carleton College, where he teaches courses in music of the United States, focusing on rock, rhythm and blues, and jazz. His book, I Hear a Symphony: Listening to the Music of Motown, is forthcoming from University of Michigan Press. He is also co-author of the history of rock textbook What’s that Sound.

David K. Hildebrand (Ph.D. musicology, The Catholic University of America) is Director of the Colonial Music Institute in Annapolis, Maryland. He specializes in performing early American music, is a frequent consultant for recordings and documentary films and other projects, and has produced seven CDs of American music. He teaches music history at the Peabody Conservatory, and is currently studying music in the War of 1812. Johns Hopkins University Press will soon issue his co-authored history of music in Maryland.

Tammy L. Kernodle is Professor of Musicology at Miami University in Ohio. In her research, she concentrates primarily on the intersection of race and gender in both concert and popular music. Her work has appeared in a number of anthologies and journals and her book Soul on Soul: The Life and Music of Mary Lou Williams (Northeastern University Press, 2004) is the most current biographical and analytical study of the jazz pianist and her music.

David Kirby is the Robert O. Lawton Distinguished Professor of English at Florida State University. He is the author of Little Richard: The Birth of Rock ’n’ Roll, which the Times Literary Supplement of London called a “hymn of praise to the emancipatory power of nonsense.”

Oboist and musicologist Roberto Kolb-Neuhaus specializes in the study of the music of Silvestre Revueitas, and has published several books, supervised critical editions, and produced recordings, digital databases, and websites related to this composer. He is a researcher at the National Autonomous University of Mexico and artistic director of Camerata de las Américas.

Horace J. Maxile, Jr. is Assistant Professor of Music Theory at Baylor University. He holds the Ph.D. in Musicology (Music Theory emphasis) from Louisiana State University. His primary research interests include musical semiotics, jazz analysis, and concert music by African American composers. These interests and others are explored in articles in Black Music Research Journal, Annual Review of Jazz Studies, and Journal of Black Studies.

Grant Olwage is a graduate of Christ Church College, University of Oxford, and Rhodes University (Grahamstown, South Africa) and has held research fellowships at the Universities of Amsterdam and the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, where he is currently a lecturer in the Wits School of Arts. He is the editor of Composing Apartheid and is working on a monograph on Paul Robeson's voice.

Alan Shockley is Director of Composition/Theory in the Cole Conservatory at California State University, Long Beach. His works appear on Wergo, Princeton Alumni Council, Jack Straw Studios, and BohnMedia recordings, and he has recent commissions from the California E.A.R. Unit and Trio Terroir. His articles address contemporary music as well as Joyce, Burgess, and other authors. His book, Music in the Words: Musical Form and Counterpoint in the Twentieth-Century Novel, is published by Ashgate.

Larry Stempel, a former member of the BMI Lehman Engel Musical Theatre Workshop, is Professor of Music and Affiliated Faculty in American Studies at Fordham University. His Showtime: A History of the Broadway Musical Theater (W. W. Norton, 2010) received the 2011 Kurt Weill Book Prize of the Kurt Weill Foundation for Music, and the 2012 Irving Lowens Book Award of the Society for American Music.

Travis D. Stimeling is Assistant Professor of Music at Millikin University. He is the author of Cosmic Cowboys and New Hicks: The Countercultural Sounds of Austin's Progressive Country Music Scene (Oxford University Press, 2011) and has published numerous articles on country music and American vernacular music. He is currently editing an anthology of primary source readings in country music history for Oxford University Press.

Karin Thompson is Associate Professor of Music at Walla Walla University in Washington State. She holds a master's degree in cello performance from the Peabody Institute of Johns Hopkins University and a Ph.D. in musicology from the University of Maryland, College Park.

Denise Von Glahn is Professor of Musicology and Director of the Center for Music of the Americas at Florida State University. She writes on music, nature, and place. Her newest book, published by Indiana University Press, is Music and the Skillful Listener: American Women Composing the Natural World. An earlier book, The Sounds of Place: Music and the American Cultural Landscape, won the ASCAP-Deems Taylor Award in 2004.
