

King Richard the Second treacherously murdered by Sir Piers Exton at Pontefract Castle. Page

"King Richard the second treacherously murdered by Sir Piers Exton at Pontefract Castle" from Joseph Graves, Dramatic Tales founded on Shakespeare's Plays. London. J. Duncombe, 1840. Folger ART File S528k7 no.32 (size XS)

This engraving, produced for Joseph Graves' Dramatic Tales founded on Shakespeare's Plays (1840), depicts Richard in Pomfret Castle, defending himself with one of the murderers' own weapons, at the moment when Exton slays the king (5.5.110).

From an original in the Folger Shakespeare Library
Licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International License (CC BY-SA 4.0)