

Drawn by G. F. Sargent.

Engraved by J. C. Fenn.

THE MARKET PLACE AT ATHENS.

"Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?"

TIMON OF ATHENS, ACT 3, SCENE 2.

Printed by Alfred Allard.

London, Published by How & Parsons 132 Fleet Street, April 1, 1841.

Sargent, G. F., artist. "The market place at Athens," in Shakespeare Illustrated, 1842. J. C. Fenn, printmaker. London: How & Parsons, 1841. Folger ART File S528t3 no.6 copy 1 (size XS)

The Athenian marketplace is central to the plot of Timon of Athens. The quote in this nineteenth-century print, "Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?" (3.2.44), highlights the role of the marketplace as a communal forum for news as well as a place to exchange goods, and -- in this case-- call in debts.

From an original in the Folger Shakespeare Library
Licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International License (CC BY-SA 4.0)